RA-5C 151623 RVAH-7, USN, USS Enterprise
Cdr C H Jarvis (survived)
Lt(jg) P M Artlip (survived)

The Enterprise lost two aircraft on the 12th, its first combat losses during its second cruise. An RA-5C and its Phantom escort were flying at 500 feet and 560 knots just off the coast near Long Chau, 30 miles northeast of Thanh Hoa, when they ran into a heavy barrage of anti-aircraft fire. The Vigilante was hit in the starboard wing and soon became uncontrollable forcing the crew to eject just offshore. A large SAR operation swung into action involving an E-2A, two SH-3s, four F-4Bs, four A-1Hs and a USAF HU-16 Albatross as well a Navy destroyer. Cdr Jarvis was rescued by the Albatross amphibian flown by Lt Col A R Vette, commander of the 37th ARRS, while Lt Artlip was picked up by a Navy SAR helicopter. During the rescue an orbiting F-4B fired a Sparrow air-to-air missile at a North Vietnamese patrol boat that attempted to capture the downed airmen. It was unclear if the missile actually hit the boat but the vessel turned away and made for home.

SAIGON—A downed navy pilot with a broken arm was rescued from the Tonkin Gulf Sunday.

An Air Force HU-16 Albatross crew picked up the pilot amid a hail of small arms fire from nearby junks and antiaircraft fire shore batteries.

The rescued pilot was one of two navy men flying a reconnaissance mission over north Vietnam in a RA-5C Vigilante which was hit by antiaircraft fire south of Haiphong.

They reached the gulf before bailing out and hit the water about half a mile offshore. One of the men was picked up by a Navy rescue helicopter that had to abandon the second rescue because of mechanical trouble.

Air Force Col. Allan R. Vette, 47, of Gulfport, Miss., pilot of the Albatross, put the aircraft down on the water for four minutes while A2C Charles Hanson, 21, of Brainard, Minn., pararescue-man, jumped into the water, freed the pilot who was tangled in his parachute, and brought him to the plane.

"We were drawing fire all the time," said Vette. "We could see the muzzle flashes and the bullets hit the water so we got in and out quick."

Capt. Samuel L. Hall, 28, of York, Neb., Navigator, and A1C George V. Walkner, 24, Takoma, Wash., flight mechanic, helped pull the pilot into the aircraft.

Other members aboard the Albatross were 1st Lt. Charles G. Rapp, 26, Columbus, Ohio, copilot, and A1C Dale F. Tupper, 34, Sacramento, Cal., the radio operator.

Pilots Batter Rails, Highways In North

S&S Vietnam Bureau

SAIGON—Rail facilities and highways in the panhandle were among the first targets hit by U.S. pilots Tuesday in a resumption of air strikes against north Vietnam.

The strikes ended earlier speculation on a possible extension of the bombing pause caused by the 4-day New Year Truce.

U.S. Ships Fire On N. Viets

SAIGON — Two U.S. Navy destroyers joined the action Tuesday when U.S. military activity in north Vietnam was resumed.

The first reported action occurred when the destroyer Alfred A. Cunningham sighted three logistics craft near the mouth of the Song Giang River, north of Dong Hoi.

The Cunningham fired on the craft and left them burning.

Later, the USS Straus was fired on by two shore batteries on Ho Nieu and Hon Matt islands. The fire was returned and the shore batteries ceased firing.

There was no damage to the Straus.

Spare Viet Crops, Experts Ask LBJ

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than 5,000 American scientists asked President Johnson Tuesday to end use of riot gas and anti-crop chemicals in Vietnam.

They said in a petition that use of such weapons by the United States "sets a dangerous precedent, with long-term hazards far outweighing any probable short-term military advantage."

Flying in poor weather and using radar to pinpoint most targets, air force pilots accounted for 12 of the missions flown in the north. One of the targets, a highway bridge seven miles south of Dong Hoi, was hit by two air force F-4C Phantoms.

Navy A-6 Intruders struck rail facilities at Dong Phong Thuong, Thanh Hoa, Phu Ly and Nam Dinh.

Enemy base camps, infiltration routes, fortifications and water traffic were hit during 535 sorties flown in South Vietnam Monday.

Of the total, air force pilots flew a record 378 sorties, including 181 in support of ground operations.

Damaged or destroyed were 80 fortified positions, 16 sampans, two gun positions and numerous other targets.

Out of 157 sorties, Marine pilots flew 33 in support of Leatherneck ground operations, including Operation De Soto in Quang Ngai Province. The pilots destroyed or damaged 71 structures, 18 fortified positions, a trenchline and gun position and cut four infiltration routes.

AC-47 Dragon Ship crews supported a special forces unit in Phu Yen province and units of the 11th Armored Cav. Regt. 39 miles southeast of Saigon with mini-gun fire and flares.

B-52 crews struck three times in South Vietnam late Monday and early Tuesday. Targets included a base camp 16 miles southwest of Da Nang, a suspected headquarters complex north of Kontum City, and an enemy camp area 12 miles south of Hue.

This indicates the high level of morale in the service, the Army said.

In the same period, 6,797 officers and 59,834 enlisted men have volunteered for Vietnam duty.

Last year, the Army assigned more than 41,000 officers and enlisted men to Vietnam.

Booby Trap Kills A

NUI DAT, Vietnam (UPI) — A booby trap killed and wounded several Australian soldiers Tuesday during the search of a small village.

The accident occurred after Bn. 50, Royal Australian Regt., had surrounded the village of An Nhut, five miles southeast of Nui Dat.

Two officers nudged the barbed wire that surrounded the village, setting off the booby trap, believed rigged from an 81mm mortar round.

Two Australian helicopters evacuated the wounded to Vung Tau.

The Australian troops suffered no other casualties during the two day operation which ended Tuesday.

"We walked through really thick jungle — we cut our way through," said photographer Frank Johnson, who went along. The Australians never used any of the existing trails, he said.

By late afternoon, the battalion had reached the final staging area and after several hours rest they began to surround the village.

"We moved about 2,000 meters across rice paddies, a couple knee-deep in water, but most pretty dry," said Johnson. Everyone wore white ribbons in their floppy hats so they could see the man in front in the pitch dark.
