

DEPARTMENT OF THE AIR FORCE
67TH AEROSPACE RESCUE AND RECOVERY SQUADRON (MAC)
APO NEW YORK 09405

REPLY TO
ATTN OF: DOPJ

SUBJECT: Pararescue Combat Tactics Section

TO:

1. This job description will designate in a general sense the responsibilities of the Pararescue Combat Tactics NCO. Specific operating instructions and responsibilities will be designated by the Combat Tactics NCO and NCOIC of Pararescue.

A. Identify aircraft, equipment and personnel combat requirements.

B. Initiate, evaluate, and revise as necessary (in cooperation with unit intelligence personnel) current intelligence requirements for Pararescue personnel.

C. Research and procure as necessary operating instructions for the handling and firing of small arms and for such other ordnance as directed.

D. Research infiltration and exfiltration techniques.

E. Research and procure as necessary, information from a variety of sources, concerning evasion techniques.

F. Research Combat Communications techniques.

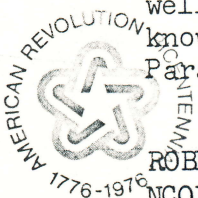

G. Research and procure as necessary, information on formalized prisoner of war (POW) organization techniques.

H. Research and procure as necessary information on the mental and physical aspects of captivity.

I. Research and procure as necessary, information on the Code of Conduct, Geneva Convention and resistance to interrogation techniques.

J. Perform such other duties related to Combat Tactics as directed by the NCOIC Pararescue Section.

2. As the number of Pararescuemen on active duty, with firsthand combat experience declines, the training of newer, less experienced personnel becomes paramount concern. Changes in world situations both political and military, improvements in tactics and military hardware accrue daily. A well trained, highly motivated Combat Rescue Force demands a consumment knowledge of current combat tactics. Your success will be measured in the Pararescuemen around you.

ROBERT G. WHEELER, SMSgt, USAF
NCOIC, Pararescue